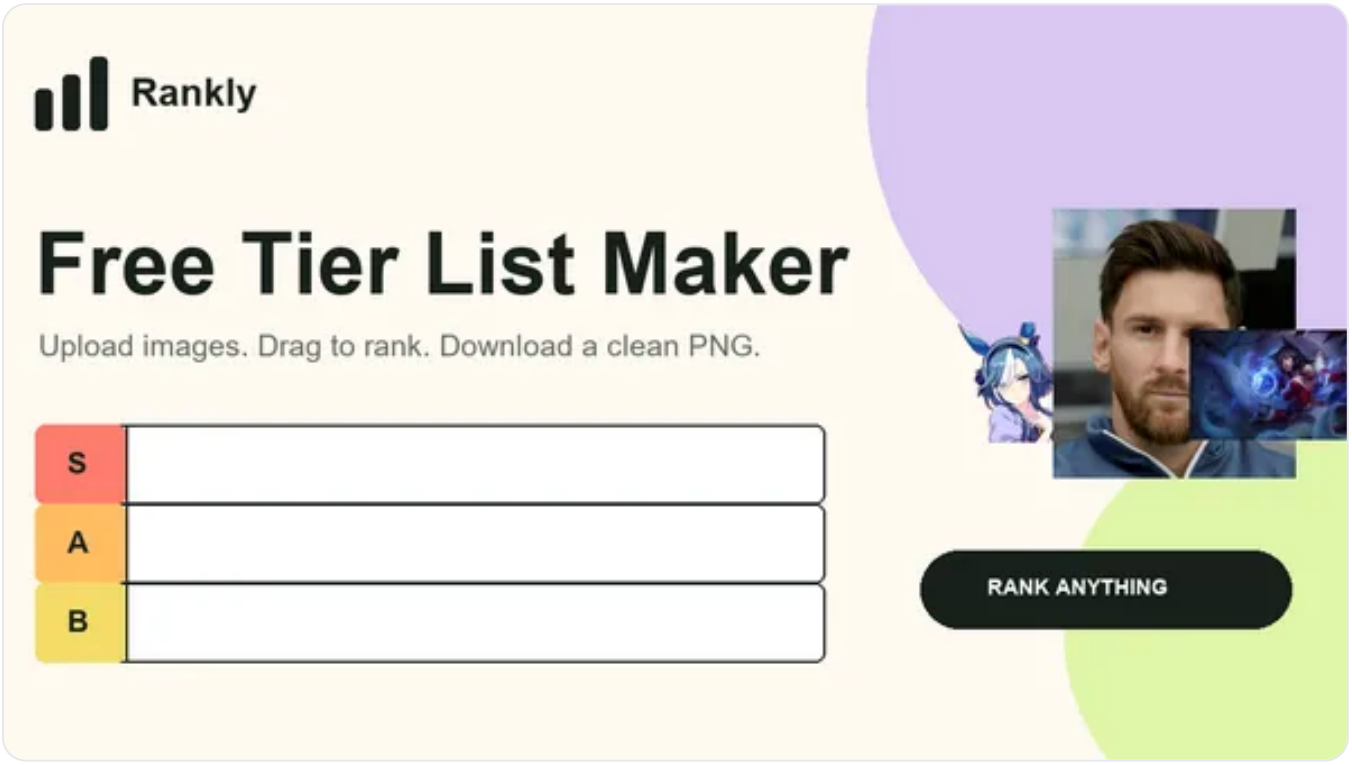
Free Tier List Maker

Create image rankings in the browser, choose a template or upload your own images, and export a shareable PNG with no sign-up.



About

Free Tier List Maker is a tier list maker for building image rankings in your browser. You can upload images or start from a ready-made template, drag items into custom tiers, rename the labels, and download a shareable PNG without creating an account.

What is Free Tier List Maker

Free Tier List Maker is a browser-based tier list maker for turning images into ranked boards. It lets you either upload your own pictures or open a starter template, then sort items into tiers with drag and drop. The result can be exported as a PNG, which makes it

The app is designed around a simple live editor rather than a complex project workspace. The site says items stay in your browser, and it does not require sign-up. That makes it closer to a fast online ranking tool than a full account-based design platform.

Key features

Free Tier List Maker focuses on a short path from inputs to export.

- Upload image files in common formats: PNG, JPG, and WEBP.
- Build a ranking from up to 100 images in the editor flow, with a separate site note that upload capacity can go up to 200 images.
- Start from ready-made tier list templates for popular topics such as Pokémon, Genshin, Marvel Rivals, DC Movies, LoL, and Fast Food.
- Drag items into custom tiers in a live editor.
- Rename tier labels to match your own criteria.
- Download the finished tier list as a PNG for sharing.
- Use it without account creation or sign-up.
- Keep uploaded images in the browser according to the site's workflow notes.

The template library is one of the main strengths. The source shows topic-specific starting points with different sizes and filters, including a Pokémon template with 1,025 entries and filters/search, role-based League of Legends ranking, and templates for movies, heroes, food chains, and more.

How to use it

Free Tier List Maker keeps the workflow short, and the editor is built for quick sorting.

- Open the site and choose whether you want to upload images or start from a preset topic.
- Add your images from your device, or pick a ready-made template if you want a starter library.
- Drag each item into a tier such as S, A, B, C, or D, or rename the tiers to fit your own scale.

Review the live board while you sort, since the editor updates as you move items around.

When your ranking is done, export it as a PNG file.

Share the image wherever you want, since the output is a standard shareable graphic.

A practical detail from the site: the upload area accepts PNG, JPG, and WEBP files, with a stated limit of up to 10 MB per file in the upload instructions.

Who it is for

This tier list maker is a fit for people who want a fast visual ranking without signing into a product suite.

Fans making character or franchise rankings for games, anime, films, or sports.

Creators who want a clean PNG to post on social platforms or in community chats.

People comparing products, foods, albums, teams, or personal favorites.

Anyone who wants a template-first ranking board instead of building a layout from scratch.

Users who prefer a lightweight web tool over desktop design software.

It is especially useful for topic-based lists where the category already has a known roster, such as characters, champions, heroes, or movie titles. The ready-made editors reduce setup time when you do not want to collect every image yourself.

What to know before you use it

Free Tier List Maker is helpful, but it has a few limits and caveats.

The site provides a ranking editor, not a general-purpose image editor. It is meant for arranging items into tiers and exporting the board, not for advanced graphic design.

Some capacity details differ across the page: the how-it-works section says you can select up to 100 images, while another area says upload up to 200 images. If your project is large, test the flow before you commit.

The site says images stay in your browser, so it is not positioned as a cloud library or team workspace.

Template counts and topic libraries are subject to change, so if you need the current roster for a franchise or game, verify the template contents inside the app.

For official character lists, game rosters, movie catalogs, or other authoritative data, use the original source or publisher if accuracy matters more than speed.

In short, Free Tier List Maker is best when you want a quick image ranking board, a simple tier list generator, and a no-sign-up export path. If you need auditing, source control, or official data verification, use a more specialized source instead.
